THE INDUCTION programme for newly-admitted PhD researchers of Commerce Department of Guru Ghasidas Central University (GGCU) was organised in the varsity campus on Friday. Vice Chancellor Professor Alok Kumar Chakrawal was the Chief Guest while Registrar Professor Manish Srivastava was special guest of the programme.

Professor Chakrawal while congratulating the newly-admitted PhD scholars said that the youths should conduct researches on subjects which are useful to the society and nation at large. He said that new facts, principles, methods and objects are discovered in research and hence we must carry out such research work whose references become standard in the whole world. A researcher should choose such subjects which contain solutions to the problems of the society and the nation.

The Vice Chancellor gave researchers the basic mantras of success along with the nuances of start-ups, business discipline and business models through various examples. He said that apart from being a good researcher or a good teacher one should also keep in mind the first priority which is being a good human being. Being disciplined with dedication, practice, restraint and coordination, researchers can produce better results with limited resources.

At the beginning of the programme, Head of Department of Commerce Bhuvana Venkataraman gave the welcome address. Registrar Prof. Manish Srivastava also expressed his views. Dignitaries including Dr Shailesh Dwivedi, Dr Buddheshwar Singra heads of all departments, teaching staff, research scholars of the Department of Commerce and Management Studies, besides others were present on the occasion.
