ABSTRACT

The Green Revolution in India was initiated in the 1960s by introducing high-yielding varieties of rice and wheat to increase food production in order to alleviate hunger and poverty. In this first „wave“ of the Green Revolution was largely confined in wheat crop and in northern India such as Punjab, resulting in a limited contribution to overall economic development of the country. On the contrary, the agricultural growth in the 1980s (the second „wave“ of the Green Revolution) involved almost all the crops including rice and covered the whole country, it enabled to raise rural income and alleviate rural poverty substantially. Such a rise of rural India as a „market“ for non-agricultural products and services was an important pre-requisite for the rapid economic growth based on non-agricultural sectors.“But the production of other food crops such as indigenous rice varieties and millets declined. This led to the loss of distinct indigenous crops from cultivation and also caused extinction.

ABSTRACT

Cottage industry have always had an important role in indian economy. it helps in export and it provides most employment to rural youth after agriculture. In cottage industry products are produced at low level and work is done by skilled workers. Furniture, woods, bamboo products, products made from glass, khadi, handloom, handicrafts products are major part of cottage industry. every state and region of india have some expertise in producing some special products.. Chicken work of lucknow and Kashmiri shawls are famous for their embroidery. These products mainly produced by cottage industry. these products need marketing and branding but cottage industry lacks financial support so they can not apply the marketing strategy of medium and large industry. They need a paradigm shift in marketing. this paper aims at study the marketing strategies of cottage industry.

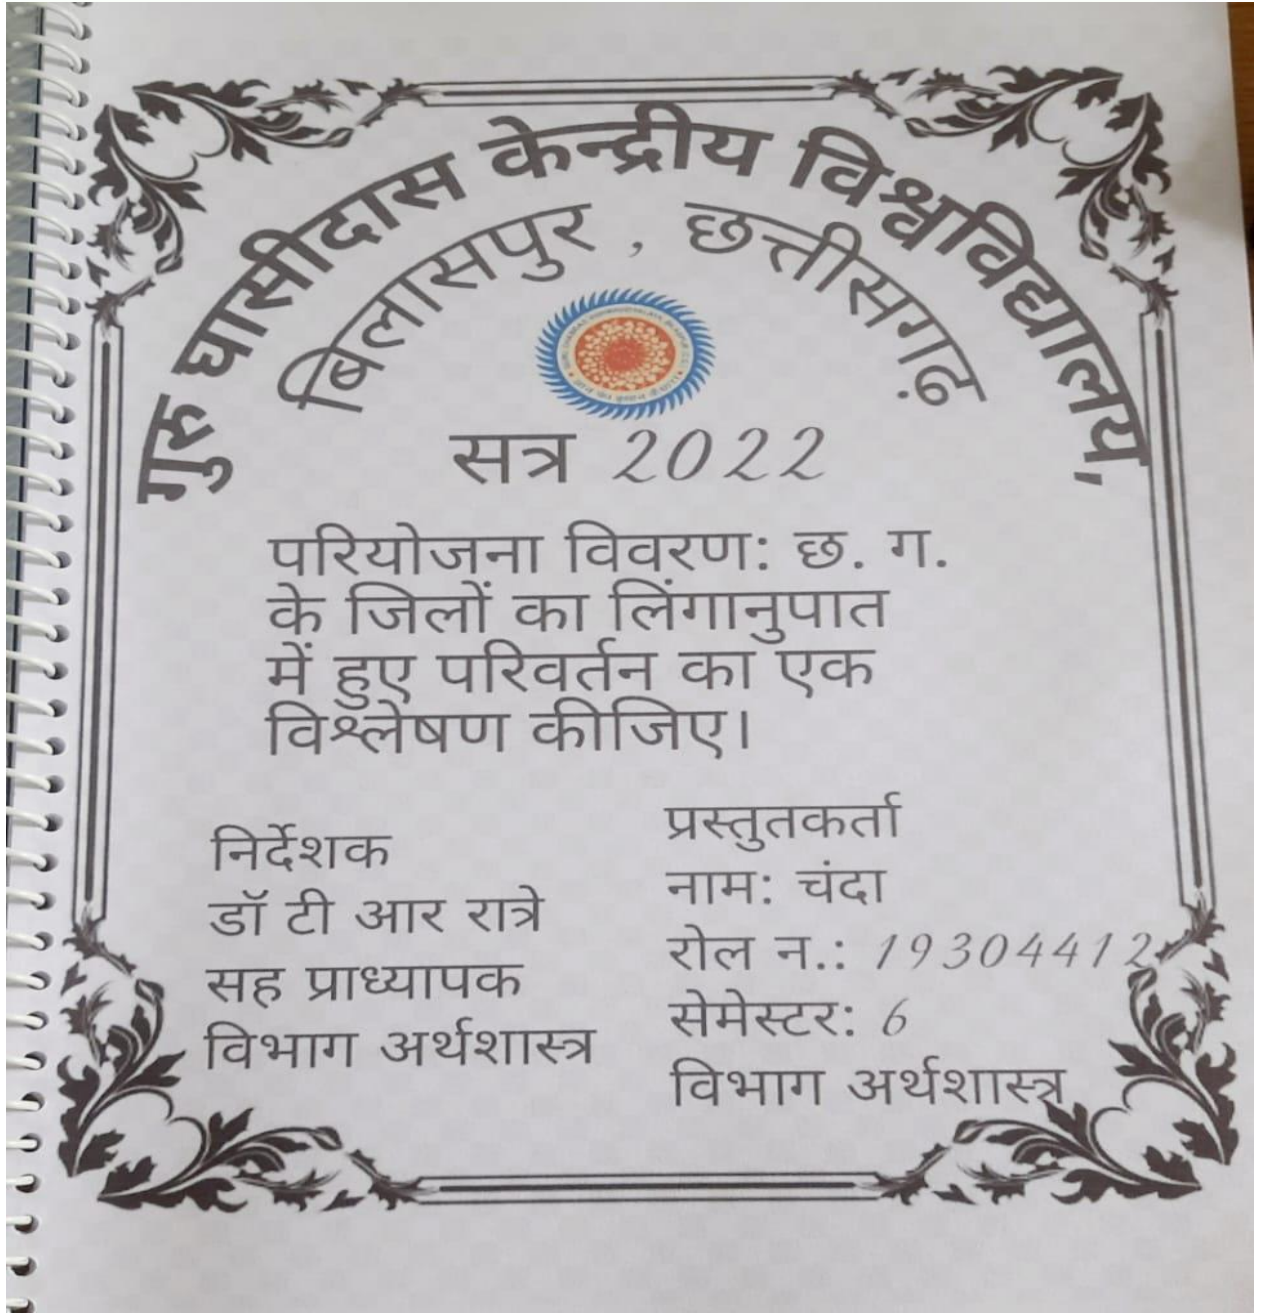

Cottage industry have always had an important role in indian economy. it helps in export and it provides most employment to rural youth after agriculture. In cottage industry products are produced at low level and work is done by skilled workers. Furniture, woods, bamboo products, products made from glass, khadi, handloom, handicrafts products are major part of cottage industry.

ABSTRACT

Digital India is a campaign launched by the Government of India to ensure that Government services are made available to citizens electronically by improving online infrastructure and by increasing Internet connectivity or by making the country digitally empowered in the field of technology. It was launched on 1 July 2015 by Prime Minister Narendra Modi. The initiative includes plans to connect rural areas with high-speed internet networks. Digital India consists of three core components - the creation of digital infrastructure, delivery of services digitally and digital literacy.

The journey towards a digitally – connected India began in the early 90s and 2000s with the introduction of a range of e – governance programmes. However, its impact was limited. With a clear vision, the present government is pushing ahead the Digital India initiative to transform the country into a digitally empowered society and a knowledge economy. With the launch of this initiative, the government aims to reach out to citizens in the remotest of locations and make them a part of India's growth story. Since technology is a key driver in causing disruptive change, digital tools will empower citizens and prove to be a game-changer.

Digital India provides the much-needed thrust to the nine pillars of growth areas, namely Broadband Highways, Universal Access to Mobile Connectivity and Public Internet Access Programme, e-governance, e-Kranti, information for all, electronics manufacturing, IT for jobs and early harvest programmes. Digital India has been introduced to ensure smooth implementation of e – governance in the country and transform the entire ecosystem of public services through the use of information technology. There is no better way to promote inclusive growth other than through the empowerment of citizens.

The major targets of the programme are to create a digital infrastructure as a utility to every Indian citizen. This includes providing high-speed internet, mobile phone and bank account enabling participation in digital & financial space, shareable private space on a public cloud, and creating a safe and secure cyber space. The programme aims to take digital literacy to the next level, and will focus on finding ways to encourage people to opt for cashless financial transactions. The initiative also aims at seamless integration across departments/jurisdictions, and ensuring availability of services in real time from online and mobile platforms.

Keywords: Digital India, e – Governance, Internet, Government, Digital Technology, e-Kranti.

ABSTRACT

Taxation is a common concept used by every government from early monarchies to present democracies to collect their own income from the people using land laws and is related to taxation. Although their type, name, nature, structure, extent and rate have varied since their evolution. Every society faces some problems such as national defense, social welfare, administrative problems, developing infrastructure, natural disasters such as floods, droughts, etc through ages that can be resolved by the competent authority. Today's world society is more developed than ancient societies, but the challenges are more complex, and the nature and scope of taxation systems have changed over time. Now, the government's role in addressing these problems has increased dramatically. In addition to laissez-faire, governments often intervene in economic activity to manage externalities to prevent severe economic failure; instead of maintain law and order, protection of people from war and foreign aggression. Developing countries like India face socio-economic problems such as poverty, unemployment, illiteracy, lack of public goods, access to primary health services, income disparities, inequality, which force it to play various other roles for the advancement of society. Therefore, without compromising the legal framework of the FRBM (Fiscal Responsibility and Budget Management) Act roadmap, direct and indirect taxes are essential to generate enough revenue for the country to meet growing public spending. Tax revenue promotes faster economic growth, higher welfare and economic stability.

But the still-low tax-to-GDP ratio is worrisome. This trend continues due to the low number of taxpayers, tax avoidance, tax erosion and difficulties in tax administration. Direct taxes have limited scope to increase revenue for governments; thus, indirect taxes play an important role, but their structure and nature have cascading effects, simplicity of implementation and general public understanding, ease of collection, unequal perspectives on tax rates, and economic compliance. On this line, GST could reduce some of the problems we have with the indirect tax system, but there is still a lot of work to be done. Every citizen of the country has to pay taxes.
